Tearing up Toronto: Not all my innings had crazy strike rates. Here I'm seen hitting a six (one of six) in a knock of 109 off 94 balls at the 1998 edition of the Sahara Cup in Toronto. This India–Pak series was a wonderful competition in North America. My century would be the first one in the tournament which, unfortunately, is no longer held.

Fallen Hero: Like any Pakistani teenager, I grew up worshiping Waqar Younis. But over the years, once we began playing together, our relationship soured. I rank him as a good teammate and a below-average captain. But our falling out occurred later, when as coach, he didn't trust me, be it on or off the field. Seen here are Saqlain Mushtaq, Waqar and I, messing around during the nets at my home ground, the National Stadium in Karachi in 2000.
