

Sketch 13.1: The terrorists' ambush plan at Tashkent Chowk, Baramulla.

We were old hands at this game and did not oblige the terrorists. Our response to this provocation was measured and cool. We fired accurately and purposefully and for effect. During the fierce encounter in the bustling market, it was amazing that only a few civilians had got injured in the crossfire.

Having deployed the available troops, we took stock of the situation. I was happy to see that there were no fatal casualties amongst my men. The Rover, which stood out because of its