sleep. Next morning when they raised the sheet they found nothing. The flowers of both communities were fresh'.[3] Guru Nanak is still reverently looked upon and remembered as, 'Baba Nanak Shah Faqir – Hindu ka Guru, Musalman ka Peer' (learned Nanak, the King of Fakirs – Guru of the Hindus and Sage of the Muslims).

Guru Nanak Dev and his two disciples (From Japjee: The Sikh Morning Prayer.[2])

Guru Arjan Dev, the fifth guru, compiled the scriptures called 'the Adi Granth, containing more than 7000 hymns rendered lyrically',[4] the precursor to Granth Sahib in its final form. His spiritual period of twenty-five years also saw the emergence of Amritsar as the seat of Sikh religion. Amritsar, which means 'amrit sarovar' (lake of nectar), was chosen by his father, Guru Ram Das, to build the Harmandir Sahib (House of God). Jehangir, son of Mughal emperor Akbar, was intolerant of the secular preachings of Sikhism, unlike his father, and he arrested Guru Arjan Dev and had him tortured to death in 1606. This resulted in a tumultuous period of transformation and evolution of Sikhs in the next 150 years. They
