Not content with that, Anshu, the determined and intrepid mountaineer that she is, made a second successful ascent of the Everest on 21 May and created a world record. Basking in the glory of these achievements, we now hope that the National Institute of Mountaineering and Adventure Sports at Dirang would become a reality in two or three years.

To increase the availability of better habitat for tourists, we proposed to the northeastern council to upgrade seventeen of our most beautifully located forest inspection bungalows. Some of them provide a view that is out of this world. Most of these structures are in a woeful and completely rundown condition. As funds are being released now, the renovation of these bungalows will be done in a phased manner. This project will be a landmark achievement in the field of Arunachal tourism. In a meeting in 2008 with the then tourism minister, Ambika Soni, I was able to get a commitment of Rs 12 crores for the creation of an institute of hotel management with a hostel for the students. It is satisfying to see the project coming up already in the area of Bandardewa. The first course shall commence in the academic session 2012–13.

Rohini has spearheaded various campaigns such as a breast cancer awareness programme, blood donation, and ‘ability beyond disability’ to help the challenged children and adults. So far, thirteen poor children have been provided free heart surgery in Delhi through the aegis of rotarians like Sushil Gupta and the National Heart Institute.
