to the Karnataka programme. On my return to Bombay some friends advised me to stay on for Gandhiji's arrival, which was due exactly a week later. But this was impossible. From Allahabad came news of Purushottam Das Tandon's arrest and other arrests. There was, besides, our Provincial Conference which had been fixed at Etawah for that week. And so I decided to go to Allahabad and to return to Bombay six days later, if I was free, to meet Gandhiji and to attend a meeting of the Working Committee. I left Kamala bed-ridden in Bombay.

Even before I had reached Allahabad, at Chheoki station, an order under the new Ordinance was served on me. At Allahabad station another attempt was made to serve a duplicate of that order on me; at my house a third attempt was made by a third person. Evidently no risks were being taken. The order interned me within the municipal limits of Allahabad, and I was told that I must not attend any public meeting or function, or speak in public, or write anything in a newspaper or leaflet. There were many other restrictions. I found that a similar order had been served on many of my colleagues, including Tasadduq Sherwani. The next morning I wrote to the District Magistrate (who had issued the order) acknowledging receipt of it and informing him that I did not propose to take my orders from him as to what I was to do or not to do. I would carry on with my ordinary work in the ordinary way, and in the course of this work I proposed to return to Bombay soon to meet Mr. Gandhi, and take part in the meeting of the Working Committee, of which I was the secretary.

A new problem confronted us. Our U.P. Provincial Conference had been fixed to meet at Etawah that week. I had come from Bombay with the intention of suggesting a postponement, as it clashed somewhat with Gandhiji's arrival, and in order to avoid conflict with the Government. But before my return to Allahabad a peremptory message had come from the U.P. Government to our President, Sherwani, enquiring if our conference would consider the agrarian question, for if so, they would prohibit the conference itself. It was patent that the main purpose of the conference was to discuss the agrarian question which was agitating the whole province; to meet and not to discuss it would be the height of absurdity and self-stultification. And in any event our President or any one else had no authority to tie down the conference. Quite apart from the Government's threat it was the intention of some of us to postpone the conference, but this threat made a difference.
