powers, was to free the woman constables from their 'imprisonment'. These constables were lodged at the centre (where they were undergoing training) and were permitted to go home only on week ends – that too as a special favour. Kiran allowed them to go back to their children (i.e., those women who had left behind their children without a reliable support system) after the training at the police station for the day was completed. Without their asking, Kiran gave them what they needed the most to ensure that they put in their best efforts during training and learn as much as they could. For Kiran, each one of them is an investment for the future, near and far.

Delhi Police was set on a new road – not a bylane but a highway – and the credit went to Ajai Raj Sharma, who dared to make training a priority. For the first time diverse forms of training stood unified by the following order:

ORDER

…Modern-day policing demands high professional skills and proper training plays a very vital role in preparing the police forces to meet the present and … future challenges. It has been observed that there is no uniformity in training of Constable Recruits which was being partly done by [the] PTC, and partly by DAP [Delhi Armed Police] IV Bn [Battalion], and at [the] RTC [Recruit Training Centre] Wazirabad [a locality in north-east Delhi] without adequate facilities and supervision. This anomaly needs to be removed forthwith.

Henceforth, all training being conducted at DAP IV Bn at Wazirabad (RTC) and at DAP VI Bn is brought under the supervision and control of the Principal/PTC, Jharoda Kalan, under the overall supervision of Joint CP (Training). An Addl. DCP level officer will be posted under them as Vice-Principal/RTC who will directly supervise the training in RTC Wazirabad and the training of Women Constables presently in DAP VI Bn Campus under the overall supervision. He will supervise at both the places, i.e., Wazirabad and 6th Bn DAP, but sit in Wazirabad, while the Adjutant will sit at the 6th Bn Training site. The Police Training College will now be expected to integrate training quality in content, delivery and supervision in its three institutions, i.e., Jharoda Kalan, Wazirabad and the Women Recruits Barracks [in] DAP VI Bn campus.
