Chapter 32

Her Convictions

IN KIRAN'S WORDS, HERE ARE HER BELIEFS:

ON CHILDHOOD

- Values learnt as a child stay on, unless consciously and persistently unlearnt.
- Both parents and education play a major role in instilling value systems.
- For greater all-round development, both reading and sports play a strengthening role in making a child excel in life.

ON LIFE

- Birth, being by destiny or accidental, should be considered a basis for take-off and not for relaxation or repentance.
- All humans require daily mental nourishment in the form of reinforcements, both of the spirit and the body, achieved through external and internal actions and reactions.
- Any individual who believes in a system of internal audit does not stray easily. And if he or she does so, there are higher chances of his or her returning to the path that is believed to be moral.
- Reasonably contented people cannot indulge in hypocrisy; therefore, they may not make quick leaps in positions but in the long run are happier, healthier and respected.
- An awareness that every person first lives with himself, in thoughts, in habits, in character, goes a long way in deciding the manner and quality of that person's life.
- A giving and sharing life is a richer life than one of keeping and storing all for oneself.
- Money and status by way of recognition to a person remain hollow unless supported by genuine concern for others.
- Any person who takes charge of his or her life is an empowered person.
- Consequences of actions emerging from choices are the milestones of life.
- The laws of nature offer instant rewards as well as instant punishment. It's the awareness of these laws that reveals them.
- Learning the 'swimology' of life is more important than geology, physiology and meteorology.
