CHAPTER 35

UP ALL NIGHT

25 July 2011

ENGLAND vs INDIA, 1st Test, Lord's

England 474/8 dec. and 269/6 dec.; India 286 and 261

England won by 196 runs

India 2nd innings: J Anderson 28–7–65–5

We are staying at the Regent's Park Marriott Hotel during the Lord's Test against India. I'm trying to be with Daniella, Ruby and Lola as much as I can – switching between James learning how to be a parent and Jimmy at the peak of my career. They give us rooms that usually connect next to each other. The idea is that the players can sleep in their own room and get some rest for the cricket, but still have the family next door. When the Test comes around though, Daniella is feeling really unwell. I'll sleep with the kids, I say. She's doing the vast majority of the heavy lifting with both of them, me being gone for large periods of time, so I try to pick up where I can.

When we leave Lord's on day four, India are 24/1 and tasked with batting for the whole of the fifth day to save the first Test. This last day of the Test is going to be a big one for me, with nine wickets required. I'm expected to do a lot of the bowling and I'm already working out plans on how to win the game. India, too, have come here as the number one team in the world. It's the final part of the plan that Strauss and Flower have laid down – win in Australia, then become number one in the world. If we win this summer, that will be achieved.

When I get back to the hotel though, I realise, predictably, that all the girls are now sick. Ruby is a baby – not even one – and Lola has just turned
