was moving beyond them. The only thing I ever knew is that I wanted to play cricket; always and forever. I would joke to people that I would have to be carried from the field to say goodbye. Now, I wonder if it was a joke at all.

Maybe I needed to be told to stop. Maybe it's a good thing that someone else made that decision for me. At least, that's what I keep telling myself.

After all, who would choose to stop doing the only thing they were put on this earth to do?

Especially if they knew they still could.