register with me that in a sliding doors moment it could have been me in the side, waving out to all those people, urn in hand. I wonder whether I will ever get a moment like that. I think it might be gone.