US government goes to court to try to force Twitter to reveal the account details of three WikiLeaks employees.

16 February After the resignation of Mubarak on 11 February, WikiLeaks continue to support the protestors in Egypt, releasing more than 450 cables from the Cairo embassy in one day.

25 February Former President George W. Bush cancels his forthcoming appearance at a 'Global Leadership Summit' in Denver when he learns that Julian Assange – 'who has wilfully and repeatedly done great harm to the interests of the United States' – will appear.

4 March WikiLeaks employee, Kristinn Hrafnsson, wins 2010 'Journalist of the Year' award in Iceland.

15 March Coverage of Cablegate begins in the Indian newspaper The Hindu. Over several weeks The Hindu reveals stories of bribery in the Indian parliament, the use by America of arms sales for political leverage, alleged links between the Pakistani intelligence services and the Taliban, and many more.

20 March The US ambassador to Mexico, Carlos Pascual, resigns after clashing with President Felipe Calderón over his criticisms of Mexican security forces in leaked cables.

7 April The Israeli paper Yediot begins the latest staggered release of cables, shedding light on familiar topics such as the close links between Israeli intelligence and the CIA, as well as more surprising stories such as the close relationship between Mossad and the King of Bahrain, and negotiations over arms-smuggling into Gaza with members of the former Egyptian regime.