11 May The US government opens a Grand Jury hearing in Alexandria, Virginia. The hearing, which will sit in secret, is to decide whether to prosecute WikiLeaks.org and its founder under the Espionage Act. On the same day, Julian is awarded the Sydney Peace Foundation's gold medal for 'exceptional courage in pursuit of human rights'.

13 May Amnesty International singles out WikiLeaks and its media partners for praise in its annual report, as catalysts for a series of uprisings against oppressive regimes across the Arab world: 'The year 2010 may well be remembered as a watershed year when activists and journalists used new technology to speak truth to power and, in so doing, pushed for greater respect for human rights.'

23 May Cable coverage begins in the El Salvadorean paper El Faro. Their coverage sheds light on negotiations over the Central American Free Trade Agreement, on deportation of El Salvadorean migrants from the US, on the attempts of left-wing former guerilla group FMLN to improve relations with America, and on American opinions of local political figures. El Faro's coverage begins: 'In El Salvador there are dozens of diplomatic missions, but only one Embassy, or at least only one that does not need to be named, the flag need not be named . . . For years, prominent public officials, party leaders and businessmen have visited the embassy to share their concerns and personal opinions with US diplomats, their hidden political strategies which they would not confess in public to the citizens of El Salvador.'

31 May Coverage of cables concerning Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland begins in the Irish Independent. Several stories concern the IRA, with a cable from Honduras claiming that they operate there, and another from Dublin quoting former Irish justice ministers as saying that a Sinn Féin politician outed as a British spy, and then later murdered in an apparent revenge attack, had in fact been outed by the British. Other cables give details of how US diplomats are involved in monitoring Irish Muslims and claims that Ireland is being used by the CIA to secretly render terror suspects.
