force, I came across a whole lot of amazing people. I made some great friends, with whom I now share a bond for life. They have stood by me through thick and thin. Even though I don't adorn the air force uniform any longer, what has become an inseparable part of my personality are the ethos and values imbibed from the thorough and professional training I received when I was part of the air force. The training and experiences I have had have helped me evolve as a stronger and more confident individual. And it is this mental strength that has helped me on several occasions to sail through tough and trying times.

On the domestic front, as I slipped into the role of a full-time housewife, it dawned upon me very soon that it wasn't as simple as I had thought. It took me some time and effort to learn to manage the household chores, along with my daughter and my pets. Here the experienced 'better halves' of the male officers came to my rescue. And soon I learnt all the tricks of the trade from them!

I do sincerely hope that readers will enjoy reading my story, as much as Captain Nirvan, Mr Kirandeep and I have enjoyed writing it for them.

If this book is able to inspire even one small-town girl to pursue her dream against all odds, I would feel the effort writing this has been worth it. Thank you for your patient reading.

Jai Hind!
