for

critical

examination

and implementation. I had written somewhere in my diary of that period:

If you want to leave your footprints

On the sands of time

Do not drag your feet.

Most of the time, communication gets confused with conversation. In fact, the two are distinctly different. I was (and am) a terrible conversationalist but consider myself a good communicator. A conversation ful of pleasantries is most often devoid of any useful information, whereas communication is meant only for the exchange of information. It is very important to realise that communication is a twoparty affair which aims at passing on or receiving a specific piece of information.

While working on the SLV, I used communication to promote understanding and to come to an agreement with col eagues in defining the problems that existed and in identifying the action necessary to be taken to solve them.